Citing 'dangerous time' Reagan seeks better links with Moscow

deot Ronald Reagan assured the Soviet Unioo Thursday night that he hopes for a better superpower relationship "in a dangerous time" following the death of Leonid L.

Brezhnev. In a oationally broadcast news conference. Reagan declared "our goal is and will remain search for peace."

He intends to keep pushing for a treaty to reduce strategic ouclear weapons, he said. Reagan indicated that Vice President George Bush probably would head the U.S. delegation to Brezhnev's funeral. As for why be would not do so himself. Reagan said "it was a plain case of looking at the schedule. It was felt it would be better for George to head that delegation."

Mixing an attitude of conciliation with one of resolve. Reagan told the emerging Soviet leadership that the United States faces the future with confidence. And, he said, "we as a free people must always be prepared for change so when it comes we are ready to meet new opportunities and challenges."

Asked whether he plans any oew initiative to lessen tensions, Reagan said "we have been trying to do that in the area of quiet dinlomacy." But, he said, it is going to require action and oot words."

Calling on the Soviet Unioo for peaceful moves. Reagan said with a smile; "It takes two to tango."

On the domestic front, Reagan acknowledged there is "under discussion" a cabinet proposal to raise gasoline taxes in order to rebuild the United States decaying bridges and highways and create jobs in the wake of 10.4 perceot unemployment. But oo decision has been made, he said. "We think we are on the right course." the presideot said of his ecocomic program.

ndropov elected party chief

TWENTY PAGES

MOSCOW, Nov. 12 (Agencies) - Former KGB security police chairmao Yuri Andropov Friday succeeded the late Leonid Brezhnev as Party chief and pledged himself to follow the domestic and foreign policy line of his predecessor.

Andropov, 68, speaking shortly before his unanimous election by a special meeting of the party's leadership, called on the people to close ranks and to do their utmost for the good of the Soviet people."

He also said it was well-known that it was useless for the Soviet Unioo "to heg peace from the imperialists." Peace, he was quoted 24 saying by Tass news ageocy, could be upheld only hy "resting upon the invinci. ible might of the Soviet armed forces."

He said that Brezhnev in his various roles as party chief, head of state and chairman of the defense council had constantly ensured that the country's defensive strength was up to present-day requirements.

Andropov's comments oo the Soviet armed forces struck observers as surprisingly militant. He said Brezhnev had died at a time when his efforts were being directed at carrying out economic, social and cultural tasks set by the 26th party coogress.

"Our priority duty is to implement these tasks, to constantly put into life the home and foreign policy course of our party and the Soviet state which was elaborated under the guidance of Brezhnev," he was quoted as saying.

"It is the duty of every one of us, to close our ranks, to rally even stronger round the party central committee, and to do our otmost in our post and in our life for the good of the Soviet people. "Our plenary meeting convened today to pay tribute to the memory of Brezhnev and to ensure the continuation of the cause to which he devoted his life," he was quoted as saying.

Andropov carries with him the hurdeo of age and uncertain health. He has notoriously poor eyesight and many Western diplomats who bave met him in recent years have said that though be impresses by his clarity of expression and clear-thinking he looks occasionally very frail physically.

Signs that Andropov was moving into a position where he could hope to succeed to the top party post go back to last May when he quit the leadership of the KGB security police which he had headed since 1967. The move meant be distanced himself from his possibly damaging association with the KGB while he became at the same time one of 10 powerful secretaries.

Oil market upturn is predicted

JEDDAH, Nov. 12 - Saudi Arabia may soon increase oil output as an upturn in world demand could be around the corner and a rundown of oil company stocks is expected to end, Deputy Oil Minister Abdul-Aziz Al-'Turki was quoted today as saying. He said a short-term output cut did not give a clear picture of Saudi Arabian production, according to Saudi Business.

Average annual output was the true reflection of production and " under such a definition, Saudi Arahian production may be maintained or even increased somewhar in the near future," he said.

Saudi Arabian output averaged 9.8 million barrels per day last year. Industry sources by production may rop six million bpd this menth after hitting a low of 5.3 million in

Current production "may not reflect intermediate or long-term production forecasts envisaged for Saudi Arabia, which could assume an entirely different size," Turki

He said the non-communist world's demand for oil could rise by two million to four million hpd in the next six months, and members of the six-nation Gulf Cooperation Council would fill some of this demand.

Council members are Saudi Arabia. Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Oman, Qatar and Bahrain. Turki said oil companies would not be able to run down stock appreciably after December. " Srocks are likely to be either unchanged or replenished next year. As a result, demand for OPEC oil is bound to rise. It can further be jolted in the event of a world economic upturn," he said, OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries) has faced crises this year as world oil demand has slumped and oil companies ran down stocks displacing OPEC crude in the market. GCC countries say they have borne the hrunt of defending OPEC's reference price of $ 34 a barrel and that their patience is wearing thin, Turki said they had not drafted specific measures to pressure other sellers which discounted prices to grah more of the market at their expense but this " should not be construed as complacency,

Saudi information centers intensify educational efforts

By Omar Basaddiq Riyadh Bureau

RIYADH, Nov. 12 - The Riyadh Information Center is now staging a play by the Saudi Literary Circle, this being only one aspect of the several secondary functions of the several such centers which are being set up in a number of towns throughout the Kingdom.

They are multipurpose centers whose main activities comprise: information-gathering and collating, projection of the second Arad bian culture, enhancement of research and the encouragement of art (fine) and other artistic endeavors.

The raw information collected from various sources in the Kingdom about Saudi Arabia is properly documented, compiled into books and booklets, some of it is presented in the form of films and disseminated to the public at large.

Apart from the Information Center in Riyadh, there are four other such centers which are already operational. They are in: Jeddah, Makkah, Al Ahsa and Qassim. More are due to be set up in other areas of the

The ones which are already operational are doing well and, said Director-General Muhammad Al-Khudhair: "We are looking forward to better results."

The facilities at the center in Riyadh include: a stage-theater (complete with automatic curtains, overhead mikes) with an anditorium that has a capacity for 400 people; simultaneous translation facilities, film and slide projectors, plus a wide screen: video tape recorders (VTR) and cassettes --- showing various aspects of life in Saudi Arabia, past and present — and last, but by no means least, a library containing a wealth of information and data about the Kingdom. But Khudhair is not complacent and said that efforts are still being intensified in this

"We have appointed special informationgatherers who scour the ministries and various governmental and semi-governmental departments, collecting information and publications to be kept in our records", he explained. This information and other data are carefully documented, and in doing so, we sometimes find it necessary to avail the services of outside experts."

The books and other records in the library of the center are mainly in Arabic, but there are some in English as well as in French, and they cover a variety of subjects: historical, social economic, educational and cultural.

The center also encourages Saudi Arabian artists, and has even gone to the point of acquiring some of their outstanding paintings and displaying them at the center as part of its

In accordance with the Kingdom's Third Five Year Development Plan such centers are to be set up not only in such big cities as-Riyadh, Jeddah and Dammam, but also in other areas, such as Qassim, Hail, Abha, Skaka and Gizan. And they are open to all.

Costa Rica orders 17 Soviets to leave

The government is asking 17 of the 25 Soviet diplomats here to leave Costa Rica as soon as possible, officials said Thursday.

An official, who asked not to be identified, said the government does not recognize a written protocol signed in Moscow by Max Blanco, the first Costa Rican ambassador to the Soviet Union in the 1970s, that puts a ceiling of 25 on the Soviet mission here.

He said the government instead recognizes a verbal agreement reached when the Soviet Emhassy opened here in 1970 that limits the number to eight.

The newspaper La Nacion quoted Foreign Minister Fernando Volio Jimenez as saying the extra 17 diplomats would be asked "to abandon the country as soon as possible." He did not set a deadline.

Volio and other Costa Rican officials had expressed concern earlier this week about the to neighboring Nicaragua, where a leftist government has been in power since a 1979 revolution.

A statement from Volio on the death of Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev urged the new leaders to contribute to disarmament and end interventionist policies.

"A change in the high command of the Soviet Union always is a motive for worry," he said. "I hope that the new chief of the Communist Party and chief of state contributes more than Mr. Brezhnev to accelerating general and complete disarmament, above all nuclear, and ending Soviet military intervention and influence in the internal affairs of other countries, as is taking place now in Afghanistan, Central America and the Caribbean, to cite some cases."

The statement did not refer to the decision to ask Soviet diplomats to leave the country.

Tylenol back

NEW YORK, Nov. 12 (AP) - Johnson and Johnson Co. announced Thursday it would begin returning Tylenol capsules in "triple safety-sealed tamper-resistant packaging" to store shelves immediately.

Safety-sealed

The announcement came five weeks after the company voluntarily withdrew all Tylenol capsules from the market. The withdrawal of 22 million bottles came after seven deaths in the Chicago area were linked to cyanidelaced capsules of Extra-Strength Tylenol.

Johnson and Johnson 'chairman James Burke said the new packaging would include a box glued shut at both ends. A red plastic seal will surround the cap, and there will be a foil seal over the mouth of the bottle.

In addition, there will be hright; yellow lables on the bottle and the box with red

Johnson and Johnson will continue the Extra-Strength Tylenol name, and the packaging - except for the new safety seals and warning labels - will look the same as it did prior to the withdrawal from the market.

Johnson and Johnson is the parent company of McNeil Consumer Products Co., the manufacturer of Tylenol. The Federal Food and Drug Administration determined that McNeil was not responsible for the cyanide

Analysts said Tylenol was the nation's leading non-prescription pain reliever when the withdrawal was announced . It had an estimated 37 percent share of the market.

Argentine junta lists items for dialogue

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Nov. 12 (AP) - The Falkland Islands War, an internal fight against leftist terrorism and the huge foreign debt are among themes to be discussed with civilian sectors before a 1984 return to constitutional government, the ruling military junta said Thursday night.

A list of 15 subjects, encompassing Argentina's most controversial domestic issues, has been turned over to President Reynaldo Bignone, the junta said, with instructions to seek discussion and agreement with "representative sectors."

The object, the junta said in a 15-minute message read over national radio and television networks, "is to ensure a harmonious and orderly transfer" to civilian government

The three-man junta, which has ruled this country of 28 million inhabitants since a 1976 coup ousted civilian President Isabel Peron, did not clarify when or how discussions would be beld, nor did it mention specific groups to

Civilian political leaders, many of whom already have publicly rejected any possibility of negotiating with the military on terms for the return to civil rule, had no immediate comment.

The junta repeated its promise to return the government to civilian hands "in the first months of 1984," and said the nation's current political and economic crisis "is neither the worst nor the first that we Argentines have experienced," but is "the sum of all the errors that each of us commits."

Argentina, with a 40 billion dollar external debt, the developing world's third largest, is in a deep recession and what government officials have described as the country's worst economic crisis in a century."

"In order for the next constitutional government to assume its responsibilities in the best initial situation possible," the junta said, "it is necessary to seek conciliatory points of view, requirements and proposals and to elaborate among us the essential agreements that will provide lasting national union."

After more than a century of peace, the message said, "Argentine society now is faced with the consequences of a cruel fight that it was obliged to wage in defense of its sovereignty and its liberty against colonialism and against subversion.

The reference concerned the 74-day war with Britain over the Falkland Islands, which ended with an Argentine surrender on June 14, and the 1970s battle against leftist terrorists, a struggle human rights groups claim left between 4,000 and 15,000 disappeared per-healed in the interest of order, national security, internal peace and definitive institutional stability of the Argentine nation." the iunta said.

Also listed for discussion were: a stage of siege which was ordered in 1975 and limits constitutional guarantees, the mechanics and timetable for elections and turnover of the government, and economic plans, the 1984 national budget, hydroelectric programs, status of labor union activity which has been banned since 1976, a conflict with neighboring Chile over disputed territory at the tip of the continent, investigation of alleged economic corruption, the courts, and the role to be played by the military in the next gov-

The federal criminal office (BKA) said Adelheid Schulz, 27, and Brigitte Mohnhaupt, 33, were detained Thursday in

A BKA spokesman said police were giving no further details "for strategic reasons," suggesting they boped the arrests might lead to the capture of more suspects. Miss Schulz is suspected of involvement in the killing of three prominent West Germans that rocked the country in 1977, including the kidnap and murder of employers' leader Hanns-Martin

Miss Mohnhaupt is wanted in connection with an attempted rocket attack on the federal prosecutor's office in 1977 and the killing of a Dutch policeman the same year.

West German radio said they were also believed to have been connected with an attack on the commander of the U.S. Army in Europe, Gen. Frederick Kroesen, in September 1981.

The two women were listed along with Christian Klar and Inge Viett as West Germany's four most wanted guerrillas. Their portraits are on "wanted" posters in official buildings throughout the country. The women are described in BKA press releases as "extremely dangerous terrorists who are armed and do not hesitate to shoot."

The reward for information leading to their arrest was recently increased to 100,000 marks ($40,000). According to the BKA. Miss Schulz "took care of log, tic prepara-tions" for the murders of federal prosecutor Siegfried Buback, senior hanker Juergen Ponto and Schleyer in 1977. Kennedy's yacht lands in Mykonos Island

ATHENS, Nov. 12 (AP) — U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, taking an off-season cruise on a Greek shipowner's yacht landed on Mykonos Island after harbor authorities lost touch with the luxury vessel, the island's mayor said Friday.

The senator and his party anchored in the harbor on Thursday and spent and evening in a tavern in the port," mayor Matthew Apos-tolou said. Greek harbor authorities lost contact with The Lady Sarak, a large motor yacht belonging to shipowner Yanns Latsis, soon after the Vessel left los Island in stormy weather Wednesday.

Instead of heading for Santorini Island, as harbor authorities were informed, The Lady Sarah eruised north to Mykonos in the shelter of other islands in the Cyclades group.

Apostolou said The Lady Sarah left Mykonos on Friday morning, apparently headed back to Piracus, the port of Athens. The Massachusetts senator, who arrived in Greece last weekend on a private visit, may meet with Socialist government officials on his return to Athens.

A oational guard commander to Chalatenango province said about 3,500 troops backed by artillery were beaded toward six rebel-held towns along the border with Honduras. The area is about 80 kilometers north of San Salvador.

Other guard commanders, speaking on condition they not be identified, said another 500 troops were pushing north in Morazan province, about 225 kilometers northeast of San Salvador and another San Mîguel province.

Front (FMNL) between Salvadoran troops pushing oorth and the guns of Honduran elements firing south.

Diplomatic analysts said the operation threw into sharp focus the growing involvement of Honduras, the closest ally of the United States in Central America, in the conflicts of its neighbors - El Salvador. Nicaragua and Guatemala.

Last July, the FMNL reported that some 2.000 Hondurans had fought alongside the Salvadoran Army in an anti-insurgent sweep in oortheastern El Salvador, Radio Venceremos, the FMNL broadcasting station, said the guerrillas considered themselves in a "state of war" with Honduras.

Not long afterward a band of Salvadoran guerrillas slipped into the Honduran capital of Tegucigalpa and blew up its main power stations, blacking out the city for the better part of two weeks. In the eyes of the Central American left, Honduras has emerged as the chief instrument of the United States in the area - a contention bolstered by a recent American news magazine report that the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) was running a covert operation out of Honduras to destabilize leftist Nicaragua.

A long series of clashes along their border has pushed Honduras and Nicaragua to the brink of all-out war.

ZIA AND MRS. BHUTTO

President Zia of Pakistan has permitted the seriously ailing widow of Zulfikar Ali Bhutto to leave the country in search of advanced medical care not available in her country. He had promised to do so as soon as a medical panel recommended it and has kept his word although some will argue that he should her condition.

The permission will at least give her a fighting chance to beat off the dreaded disease although this is by no means

President Zia has done well by the sick woman and also by his own image inside and outside the country. If she had died in Pakistan while there was even a remote chance of saving her abroad the damage to his reputation would have been frighteningly long-lasting.

Mrs. Bhutto is the widow of the late Pakistani Prime Minister Ali Bhutto who was hanged following a criminal court trial. Since then she has suffered from a cancer which could be terminal meaning she might soon die because of it unless she gets highly sophisticated and advanced treatment,

She applied for permission to leave promising not to carry out anti-regime propaganda. There is no evident reason that she might break her word. But even if she did, how much harm can she do the regime of President Zia who has demonstrated his ability to stave off crises and strengthen his position since coming to power in 1977.

In fact it was a sign of political strength and self-confidence to let her go regardless of anything she might try to do.

SAN FRANCISCO GOTERA, El Salvador — El Salvador's civil war has devastated the country's backward Morazan province, wrecking what economy there was and bringing refugees and fear. Morazan bas been one of the areas worst affected by three years of fighting between the U.S.-backed army and the five guerrilla groups under the umbrella of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN).

The war has depopulated the northern half of the province, filled its capital with more than 10,000 refugees and turned Morazan into a place where fear is abundant and hope in short supply. "It's a mystery to me how all this is going to end," said Governor Dore Castro-Membreno.

'We lack housing, we lack building materials, we lack vehicles for the distribution of medicines, clothes, and other emergency supplies. But most of all, we lack jobs."

The civilian authorities here drew up a number of labor-intensive projects designed to provide work for the thousands of people driven out of northern Morazan by the fighting, which increased sharply with a guerrilla offensive in October.

But there is so little confidence in the future of the area - in the northeast of El Salvador, jutting into Honduras — that no-one was prepared to provide funds for the projects." We approached all the banks and everybody else we could think of with our plans, including a scheme for road works, and all turned us down," said Castro-Membreno. His problems, though more pronounced than often caught between the hammer of the army and the anvil of the guerrillas. The rebels have accompanied their military campaign with attacks on economic targets ranging from power pylons and public transport to telephone communications and supermarkets.

According to the guerrillas, the local population in areas under their control is providing enthusiastic support for the insurgents' struggle to "liberate El Salvador from fascist rule."

An army roadblock two kms north of the city prevents journalists from checking the veracity of the guerrilla claim, But judging from all accounts, popular support is limited by the simple fact that there is hardly any civilian population left north of the River Terola which blsects Morazan.

The refugees of San Francisco Gotera, estimated at 7,000 by the governor and around 12,000 by other sources, prefer life in makeshift shacks with "roofs" of green plastic to the hazards of the combat zones. Local residents say that the army's tough methods have helped empty the northern half of

While brutal military tactics may turn uncommitted citizens into guerrilla sympathizers or active supporters, the rebels' campaign against the economy is doing little to win them friends." Power cuts caused by dynamited pylons hardly bother the army, they have generators," said a shopkeeper.
"But they make things bard for us. When there is no power, there is no water because the pumps don't Frequent guerrilla attacks on vehicles traveling on the main northern road to San Francisco Gotera have brought traffic to a virtual halt. It now takes persistence and money to find a driver to risk the 40-minute drive from San Miguel, a province capital to the southwest, to San Francisco.

A bridge spanning the Rio Seco on that route was blown up in January 1981, and cars now have to negotiate knee-deep water. In the rainy season, when the river is swollen, traffic stops. Greenpainted iron girders lying next to the wrecked bridge testify to the government's dim expectations for an early end to the fighting.

'This stuff has been lying around for more than 18 months," explained a villager. "But after transporting it there, someoue thought 'why bother?' h would only he blown up again."

After effectively writing off Morazan economically, the army now appears to shrug off its military importance as well. The guerrillas captured four Morazan towns and bamlets in the first wave of flush out the rebels, the army high command in San Salvador said the captured places were too insignificant to warrant a large-scale counter-offensive. "If we want to take Perquin ... with a real military offensive we will do it," said Defense Minister Jose Guillermo Garcia. "But we have a strategy that obliges us to take a different attitude." According to Gen. Garcia, that strategy consists of maintaining order and protecting vital economic targets in all of El Salvador rather than rushing the army's best troops to remote areas like Morazan whenever the guerrillas make advances there.

The new line was devised, diplomatic sources in San Salvador say, at the advice of the United States, chief armorer of the 24,000-strong army. How effective it will be in the long run remains to be seen

MADRID -New French attitudes toward extradition, announced after four Basque guerrillas were arrested in southero France, suggest a major change in relations between Paris and Madrid, according to Socialist sources here. The Socialists, who won Spain's elections two weeks ago, have welcomed normal between democratic countries. Spanish security officials have frequently accused France's asylum policy of providing a base for Basque guerrillas fighting for an independent Marxist state in northern Spain. But Basque Socialist leader Jose Maria Benegas says the arrests of four ETA (Basque Homeland and Freedom) guerrillas last Saturday followed top-level contacts between Madrid and Paris.

"In a democratic system there are no political crimes, only common law crimes," foreign ministry spokesman Inocencio Felix Arias told Reuters. Leading Socialist Carlos Solchaga said the new low Socialist government could not accuse Spain of lacking in liberty or human rights, he added.

Benegas said the arrests, which included ETA's intelligence and finance chiefs, followed top-level contacts after the killing of Gen. Victor Lago Roman in Madrid on Thursday. An ETA statement said the murder was part of a war against the Spanish state which would continue whatever the government in power, and added that the Socialists were heirs of Gen. Franco. His death in 1975 started the peaceful transition to democracy.

Felipe Gonzalez, who will take office next month as Spain's first Socialist prime minister since the 1936-39 civil war, says he intends "to cradicate terrorism and to intensify the fight against it from the first moment of the new government." "He has said there can be no negotiations with ETA as long as killings continue.

Benegas described the recent arrests as the culmination of a series of contacts which began in Rome last May at an International Socialist meeting on terrorism. Spanish Socialist sources said there had been other meetings between Socialists of Spain and France to discuss ways of improving strained relations over asylum,

Senator Jose Azkarraga of the conservative Bas-que Nationalist Party said in a statement Wednesday the arrests could have been carried out a month ago but that the French had waited for the Socialist election victory here. Beuegas said police checks on Spanish Basques living in France tightened considerably last summer and Basque sources said a significant development was the June arrest of Domingo Iturbe Abasolo, known as "Txomin" and said by Spanish police to he head of ETA's hard-line military wing. Charged with possession arms, Txomin is in prison awaiting trial. A court forced him to move to northero France after a previous arrest, while yet another detention led to a sentence of three months Spanish Interior Ministry sources Wednesday confirmed press reports that ETA planned an attack during the pope's visit to the Basque country last Saturday but said the pope was not the target. They said the plan was discovered by Spain's joint anti-terrorist command. Benegas denied press reports of a link between the plan and the arrests.

The French explanation for the arrests was that the men had broken local laws. Three were charged on Monday with criminal association and extortion.

Dutch government faces missile row

THE HAGUE -The new center-right government, which took office in the Netherlands last week, could run into trouble next year over the controversial NATO plans to instal Cruise and Pershing II nuclear missiles in the country. The Christian Democratic Alliance, whose leader Ruud Lubbers became prime minister, has agreed with the right-wing Liberal Party on a program of more than $12.6 billion worth of public expenditure cuts and a wage freeze.

The economic crisis precipitated the breakup of the CDA coalnion with the Labor Party and the small center group Democrats 66 last May. But there is agreement on all sides, including the trade unions, that public spending cuts and changes in the index-linked wage increase system are essential in a situation of declining government revenue, expanding social welfare costs and unemployment topping percent. The new government says it will continue preparations for the installation of the new missiles, originally planned for late next year, along with Britain, West Germany, Belgium and Italy. The Dutch have made it clear that they are keeping their options open on accepting the missiles while U.S.-Soviet talks on arms limitation go on in Geneva.

However, the Labor Party, the biggest single parliamentary group after the general election last September, has deep reservation about the missiles plan, which it viewed as an over-hasty response to the introduction of new Soviet missiles.

The NATO deployment is totally opposed by various peace groups, the biggest of which is the Inter-Church Peace Council. The Liberals are willing to continue with the missile plans, though they say the period of preparation work can be stretched to allow time for renegotiation. But new doubts have been raised about the commitment of the Christian Democrats, an alliance of church-linked parties with a wide spectrum of opinions.

The nuclear issue came to the fore when outgoing Christian Democratic Prime Minister Andries van Agt was quoted as telling a group of visiting foreign journalists that he did not believe the missiles would ever be installed in Holland. Official spokesmen said the premier was merely drawing attention to popular concern about nuclear arms in sounding this pessimistic note. But Labor leaders, who called Van Agt to explain himself in parliament last week, asked what purpose was served by preparing for something that would not take place.

Dutch politicians of all major parties insist on their loyalty to NATO and are aware of the anxieries the nuclear debate has stirred in Washington and Bonn. Some Labor spokesmen even suggest that an agreement to increase the Dutch contribution to NATO conventional forces could be offset against the cancellation of the missile plan. Passions can run high over the issue. A year ago some 300,000 people marched in Amsterdam against nuclear weapons, and there are fears of bigger and more militant demonstrations as the issue comes to a head. One top politician pointed out recently that the Netherlands is a small, crowded country. "Putting nuclear missiles here is like basing them in the middle of Brooklyn," he Sir,

Evren promises general Kaddoumi elections next October

ANKARA, Nov. 12 (R) - Turkey's new President Gen. Kenan Evren said Friday parliamentary elections will be held in October next year unless exceptional circumstances

In his first public speech since officially taking office on Tuesday, Gen, Evren said in a television and radio address that the country had now entered the last stage of plan by the military, which seized power in a coup two years ago, to restore elected government.

"Preparations have begun of the necessary laws which will allow general elections to be held in October, 1983, unless there is an important development which would justify postponement." Evren said.

Mrs. Bhutto allowed to travel abroad

ISLAMABAD, Nov. 12 (AFP) Pakistan's military government Friday announced it will allow Begum Nusrat Bhutto, widow of executed Premier Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, to travel abroad for treatment of lung cancer, it was announced here.

The decision was announced after a medical board confirmed the disease, Mrs. Bhutto, 54, has been a vocal opponent of Gen. Zia ul-Haq, who toppled the civilian government of her late husband. She has been an active member of the Movement for Restoration of Democracy, and the leader of her husband's Pakistan People's autumn or in the following spring. He said the 97 percent majority in favor of the constitution in last Sunday's referendum was a vindication of the 1980 coup launched to end political violence.

"You have signed a document of national belief in myself and my statements and rejected those who were mere spectators to the country's slide," Evren said.

Evren appealed to opponents of the military regime to abide by the constitution and said foreign critics of his government should respect the results of the referendum. "I certainly hope that some of our European friends who always jumped at opportunities to blacken us and intervene in our internal affairs will abandon their way of thinking and salute and respect this decision of our people," he said.

A number of West European countries have heldup aid to Turkey since the military takeover to protest at the government's human rights record and what they saw as a slow return to democracy.

Evren Friday made no reference to whether he intends to resign as chief of staff and become a civilian president. He automatically became president for seven years with wide executive powers under the new constitution. Under the constitution, the president serves a seven-year term with ascendency over a one-house parliament which will be elected by general suffrage for five

"Around this time next year, we will be happy to see the Turkish Grand National Assembly using its legislative power within the democratic framework," Evren said.

RABAT, Nov. 12 (R) - Khaled Al-Hassan, chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Palestinian National Council and a member of the Executive Committee of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), arrived in Casablanca Thursday night, the Moroccan News Agency MAP said Friday. .

In a statement to reporters on arrival he said he would take part in consultations to coordinate the work of the Arab League Committee of Seven which is due to visit London on Nov. 24 to confer with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

The committee, chaired by King Hassan of Morocco, was set up by the 12th Arab summit in Fez last September to promote a Middle East peace plan by seeking the support of the five permanent members of the United Nations Security Council (China, Britain, France, the Soviet Union and the USA).

The PLO is a member of the committee along with Algeria, Jordan, Morocco, Saudi Arabia, Syria and Tunisia. The committee visited Washington to confer with President Ronald Reagan last month, and is also due to go to Paris, Peking and Moscow.

confers with Gromyko

NICOSIA, Nov. 12 (AP) — Farouk Kaddoumi, head of the Political Department of the Palestine Liberation Organization, met for two hours Thursday with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in Moscow to discuss the Middle East situation, the Palestine news agency Wafa reported.

Wafa said in a statement here Friday that Kaddoumi delivered a message of condolences from PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat to the Soviet leadership over the death of Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, and thanked them for holding the scheduled meeting 'despite the solemn event of the death."

Wafa said a joint communique issued after the talks "condemned the Israeli aggression in Lebanon, which is continuing with the practical support of the United States,"

"The two sides pointed to the atrocities committed by the Israeli aggressors in occupied Lebanese territory and to the massacre of Sabra and Shatila camps against the Palestinians." It said the two sides also pointed with relief to the "complete concurrence of the Soviet stand regarding a settlement in the Middle East (on the basis) of the principles adopted at the Fez Arab summit." The communique stated that the Arabs and their friends "should not miss the opportunity for joint action." "The most suitable framework for achieving a settlement is an international conference in which the PLO is necessarily an equal party in its capacity as the sole representative of the Palestinian people," it said.

Wafa said both sides stressed their "determined opposition to separate deals," and described recent U.S. proposals as "an attempt to block the way for establishing a Palestinian state and for keeping the PLO away from the process of finding a solution to the Middle East problem."

Earlier this week, American Pryor, who is black, rejected Stanley Christodoulou of South Africa as a prospective referee because of South Africa's apartheid policies. But at a WBA rules committee meeting Thursday, a spokesman for Pryor said the champiun would accept Christodoulou, who was named to referee the bout at the Orange Bowl

The WBA also named Keo Marita of Japan and Ove Oveson of Denmark as judges for the scheduled 15-round fight. Under WBA rules, the referee and the two judges will score the bout. Earlier Thursday, Pryor's trainer, Panama Lewis, withdrew a threat to pull Pryor out of the fight if a Spanish-speaking referee — in his case, Tony Perez of New York — was selected as the referee.

The Pryor camp objected to Perez because Arguello is from Nicaragua, and because a majority of the fans at the fight are expected

England weathers early setback

PERTH, Australia, Nov. 12 (AP) — A graceful batting exhibition from England vice-captain David Gower rescued the tournsts on the opening day of the first cricket Test against Australia at the WACA ground here Friday.

Gower was at the wicket for 143 minutes for his 72 runs and hit nine fours in an elegant display. At the close of play England had lost four wickets for 242 with stubborn opener this Tavare hatting on 66 and Derek Rangel batting with 32.

Gower was denied his century when John Theorem took a brilliant diving catch at backward square-leg off Terry Alderman's bowling. The excining lefthander, who has already toured Australia twice in his hrief Test career, has made only one century — here in 1978-79, when he scored 102.

Greg Chappell was anxious to exploit the WACA strip with his specialist pacemen, Dennis Lille and Terry Alderman, after sending England in to bat. And his move nearly paid off when Lillee had opener Geoff Cook caught by Dyson at forward short-leg for one with the score at 14.

But Gower and Tavare put on 95 for the second-wicket and then Tavare was associated in an 50-run stand with Allan Lamb for the third-wicket. The WACA strip played

Italy faces Czechoslovakia sans Cabrini, Gabriele Oriali

MILAN, Italy, Nov. 12 (R) — World champions Italy begin their European Soccer Championship campaign here Saturday with a match against Czechoslovakia that will provide a stern test of their morale and character.

Since the dizzy glory of victory in Spain, the Italians have suffered a reversal in their fortunes. Several World Cup stars have lost form and the side went down to a dismal 1-0 defeat against Switzerland in a freindly in Rome last month.

Manager Enzo Bearzot said this week he had confidence in the ability of his World Cup players to rise to the occasion once more, but he also warned his side: "This is the last time you can be assured of your places if things do not go right.

Two World Cup stars will be absent Juventus left-back Antonio Cabrini, whose many runs and pin-point crosses will be sorely missed, and stolid Inter-Milan defender Gabriele Oriali have both been left out because of injury. Cabrini's place will go to teenager Giuseppe Bergomi, who showed great composure during his few World Cup outings, while Oriali will he replaced by his Inter-Milan teammate Giampiero Marini.

Czechoslovakia bave completely revamped their team since bowing out of the World Cup in the first round, having scored only two goals both from the penalty spot. Manager Joseff Venglos has been replaced by Frantisek Havranek and only seven membera of his 16-man squad for Saturday's match

Although the side bave none of the experience and class of the Italians, they have shown signs of revival since the World Cup, drawing 2-2 with Sweden in a European Championship match and beating Denmark 3-1 in a friendly last month.

Italy will look to World Cup star Paolo Rossi, who has exploded hack to form in the past two weeks, for the inspiration needed to put the Swiss deback behind them. He followed two brilliant goals for Juventus in a European Cup match this month with another in the league last Saturday and declared: "It's been tough going since Spain, but now I feel back to my best."

But Ross's fellow striker, Francesco Graziani of Fiorentina, is still off form and Bearzot bas been criticized for not recalling Roberto Bettega, the great Juventus striker who missed the World Cup through injury.

Real Madrid maintains top berth

MADRID, Nov. 12 (R) — Real Madrid maintained their eight-week lead in the Spanish Soccer First Division Thursday and traditional rivals Barcelona dropped a rung to let Athleric Bilhao take third place.

First Division matches were played ahead of the usual Sunday to allow time between the fames for players selected for Spain's European Championship in Dublin on Wednesday.

Real Madird scored twice in the second half for an away win against Celta who took their league taily to 18 points. Barcelona were held to a 1-1 draw Real Betis, who mostly managed to contain star players Diego Maradona of Argentina and Bernd Schuster of West Germany. Maradona broke away just once with a powerful shot which goal-keeper Jose Esnaola deflected only for Francisco Carrasco to score off the rebound.

Real Zaragoza bung on to second place with 16 points after a draw away against last season's ebampions Real Sociedad of San Sebastian, who slipped from fourth to fifth place with 15 points, behind Barcelona on goal difference.

Atheltic Bilbao scored a 1-0 away win over Salamanca to move two places up the table to third with 16 points.

Meanwhile, the Colombian Football Association formally withdrew Thursday as host of the 1986 World Cup, paving the way for official bidding by other candidates.

The International Football Federation (FIFA) said a cable signed by the Colombian Association's president, Leon Londono, explained his government's refusal to support the games and FIFA's requirements made it impossible to "comply completely with the organization."

The cable was sent two weeks after Colombian President Belisario Betanenrannounced the withdrawal in a nationwide radio and television address.

Earlier, Dennis Lillee bowled the first over to Geoff Cook, who took strike at the Granstand end. Lillee was bowling to four slips, two gullies and deep fine-leg with only two men forward of the bat.

Terry Alderman took up the attack from the other end as a crowd estimated at 8,000 settled in for the first morning of the Ashes series

The first three overs of the morning were maidens as Chappell set three slips and two gullies to Alderman, who was moving the ball in the light westerly breeze. Tavare cracked Alderman through the covers for three in the fourth over of the morning to put the first runs of the board for England.

Lillee wrapped Tavare on the pads in bis third over, but impire Tony Crafter turned down the Western Australian's confident appeal, Alderman at the other end was looking for line but keeping a good length, seeking to repeat his 10-wicket effort for West Australia against the Englishmen.

Tavare turoed Lillee away to leg for the first boundary of the morning after 25 minutes. Lillee stood up his next delivery off a good length, the hall coming back sharply off the seam. Then Lillee struck on the fifth ball of his fifth over with John Dyson snapping up a close to-the-bat-catch at forward short-leg to dismiss Cook for one.

MIPTC slaps $ 25,000 fine onStockholm Open organizers

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 12 (AP) — The Men's International Pro Tennis Council slapped a record $25,000 fine against the organizers of the Stockholm Open Championships because four South Africans were refused visas to enter Sweden, MIPTC chairman Philippe Chatrier said Thursday.

The fine is the biggest against an organizer in Grand Prix history. Earlier this year, organizers of a minor event in Stuttgart, Germany, were fined $20,000 for reportedly granting players guaranteed money in addition to prize money.

The new Swedish socialist government decided to refuse visas to four South African players only ten days hefore the start of the recent tourney — the world's oldest and higgest Grand Prix indoors and the only official indoor championship recognized by the International Tennis Federation.

Kevin Chrren, Bernie Mitton, Freddie Sauer and Danie Visser were all refused visas to enter Sweden. Curren and Mitton both residing in the United States. Curren, a former NCAA champ, won the doubles title with Texan Steve Denton here last year. Since then, Sweden has issued stiffer visa rules for South Africans because of that country's apartheid policy.

"The recent incident at the Stockholm Open constituted a serious violation of the Grand Prix rules," said Chatrier, who also is president of the International Tennis Federation. "If any qualified player is denied the right to play the Stockholm Open or any other tennis event in Sweden sanctioned by the Grand Prix, all sanctions for all Grand Prix tournaments in Sweden will he withdrawn."

"It would be a tragedy if Sweden loses all Grand Prix tournaments. Sweden has produced so many stars and is still producing them," Chatrier said. "But we have a set of rules and we have to stick to them, no matter where the violations occur, in france, Britain or the United States."

Asked if the United Nations' resolution against South Africa or the Grand Prix rules were the most important, Chatrier said: "The Grand Prix rules are the most important. The U.N. resolution has nothing to do with us. That' political. It's not our responsibility."

South Africa is banned from team tennis events like the Davis Cup and the Federation Cup, but South Africans are free to play as individuals in tournaments in most countries.

In other issues, the MIPTC discussed a revision of prize money allocations to provide greater compensation for players reaching singles semifinals and finals and a reduction in the size of 64-men tourneys to 48 with first round byes for 16 seeded players.

Every player in the top 200 in singles and top 100 in doubles on the Association of Tennis Professional computer rankings has submitted a commitment to the MIPTC for the 1983 Volvo Grand Prix, which will offer prize money and honus pool reward estimated to be more than $18 million.

U.S. predicts growth Clausen asks rate at 2.5% in Commerce Department has predicted the American economy will grow 2.5 percent next year, but unemployment, inflation and interest rates will fall only slightly.

The department's forecast said unemployment in 1983 would be 9.4 percent against an average of 9.6 this year, inflation would be five percent compared to 6.2, and short-term interest rates would drop from 10.8 percent

On the basis of these predictions a presidential commission trying to save the ailing social security system calculated the system's funds would be $150 to $200 million in the red between now and 1990.

Commission Chairman Alan Greenspan said even this gloomy forecast might he over-optimistic as the U.S. economy still showed no signs of recovery.

The commission, made up of congressmen from both parties, labor leaders, business representatives and social security experts,

LONDON, Nov. 12 (R) - The Anglo-Duteb Shell group, the world's second biggest oil company, reported profits for the third quarter of 1982 down about 13 percent on the same July-September period last year.

Sbell said third quarter net income was 451 million sterling ($745 million) against 519 million sterling ($855 million) in the same

It said the strength in foreign exchange markets of the U.S. dollar, in which crude oil is priced, made it difficult to recover costs in countries whose currencies had weakened.

faces a choice between increasing contributions to the social security funds or reducing the cost-of-living adjustments to security

Meanwhile, President Reagan speaking at a press conference Thursday night said it was possible that the 10.4 percent unemployment rate could go higher, but added that this was not a good indicator of the present state of the economy

He said that unemployment is one of the last indicators to turn up in a recovering economy, adding that it is also a volatile measure during the latter period of recession. Reagan saidthere were a number of indications that the economy was becoming stronger. He cited a substantial jump in the number of consumers seeking federal housing authority backed loans to buy new homes.

President Reagan said be will not support a reduction in social security benefits. He said something must be done to bolster the government-financed retirement program or it will be bankrupt by next July.

The president called on Democrats and Republicans to set aside their political differences and find a solution to the social security

Reagan also said his administration is considering a five cent a gallon increase in the federal gasoline tax, but no final decision bas been made,

Reagan described the tax proposal, supported by congressional leaders of both bis Republican Party and opposition Democrats, as a "user fee which would be used to rebuild our roads and bighways." At a press conference earlier this year, Reagan said he would oppose any tax increase in the coming year. But at Thursday's news conference, he said the five cent increase in the gasoline tax, which now stands at four cents a gallon, "is under discussion." The president said the tax increase would only cost the average American an extra $30 a year.

rich states to invest more

UNITED NATIONS, Nov. 12 (AP) -World Bank President A.W. Clausen is calling on developed countries to invest more of their income as part of a "disciplined expansion of the world economy."

"The only way I can see to get off the seesaw between recession and inflation is through improved economic management and efficiency," he said in remarks prepared for a speech at the United Nations Friday.

"Inefficiencies which might have been tolerated in the past simply must be overcome in both developing and developed countries."

Clausen said the developed countries should try to save as much of their income as developing nations already do. "The developing countries are now, on the average, investing 25 percent of their income, a higher average than the advanced industrial countries ever achieved," he said.

Last year West Germans saved 15.3 percent of their disposable income and Frencbmen 14.8 percent. Americans saved 6.4

Clausen made a plea for more cooperation in belp to poor countries." If just 5 percent of the world's productive capacity now stands idle because of recession - and that is probably a conservative estimate - each year's lost production is about the same order of magnitude as the total income of the poorer half of humanity."

The Lonodn Financial Times reported Friday that Nigeria had told OPEC it was no longer prepared to act as host for the semiannual gathering of the 13 ministers - and might even boycott the meeting - because Gulf exporters were pressing African members to raise their prices.

For cash infusion Madagascar looks to West

ANTANANARIVO, Nov. 12 (R) -Madagascar's economy, laboring under a heavy international debt, trade deficit and falling prices on the world market for cof-fee, is looking to international organizations for a cash infusion.

Madagascar officially lists its external debt as being equivalent to over $1 billion and this year's trade deficit is put at around $166.5 million.

But Western experts say they are wary about the figures, as they exclude debts to the Soviet Union for military hardware, which Moscow wants paid on time and in President Didier Ratsiraka, who seems certain to be re-elected for a second sevenyear term following last Sunday's presidential election, came to power in 1975 aiming to break the neo-colonial hold then still wielded over Madagascar by France.

Banking, insurance, industry, mining and import and export firms were nationalized. According to Western experts, these moves ultimately broke the back of the economy through massive imports of heavy equipment, over-ambitious and ill-planned industrial projects and attempts at creating farming cooperatives in the rural areas where 80 percent of the population lives.

Though Madagascar has now toned down its militant stance to attract Western aid, its difficulties are compounded by sharply falling world prices for coffee, which brings in some 36 percent of its foreign currency earnings, Western experts say. The coffee earnings barely cover the oil bill.

Once a noted rice exporter, Madagascar now pays an annual $60 million to import its staple diet. Island farmers produce about 1.9 million tons of paddy a year, but consume most of in themselves.

Madagascar turned to specialist international institutions and last June received an immediate aid package of $70 million front industrialized countries meeting under World Bank auspices.

New talks in 1981 for $110 million were inconclusive, and it was only last June that an agreement was signed for the 1MF to release 51 million special drawing rights (SDRs) with an additional 21.8 million SDRs for compensatory financing after the Malagasy government pledged to abide by fund guidelines.

But one senior French official said Friday trade negotiations by diplomats in Washington over the past two weeks had not discussed the idea of tougher European credit facilities or other measures against Moscow in exchange for a lifting of the pipeline sanc-

Trade outlook dim -- GATT

GENEVA, Nov. 12 (R) — The General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) issued a gloomy review of the world's shrinking trade Friday, less than two weeks before a major meeting of the organization aimed at reviving international commerce.

GATT said world trade, now showing increasingly dangerous parallels to the 1930s depression years, has not yet revived from the one percent drop in value it suffered last year.

Protectionism is on the rise as governments try to shield their industries from foreign competition and a boom in hank lending in recent years has left many countries deep in debt and unable to afford more imports, the trade body said.

At the same time, Third World exporters saw prices for their commodities drop by an average 13 percent last year while those for developed countries fell by only 4.5 percent, it added. This further reduced the ability to pipeline because it involved a unilateral U.S. decision."

Taking part in the diplomatic discussions in Washington are the four Western countries most closely involved in the construction of the pipeline - West Germany, France, Britain and Italy - together with Japao and

The French official said Reagan had realized that France, as well as other European countries like Britain, refused to link the pipeline sanctions with general East -West trade measures. Trade officials said this did not rule out a decision by the United States to lift the sanctions in any case.

They were unable to say when any agreement on East-West trade measures might be reached, but said more precise guidelines for credits and for the export of sensitive technology to the Eastern bloc were being discus-finance imports.

The 194-page report said: "1981 was another disappointing year for the world economy. No improvement in these trends has become evident so far in 1982."

In a section designed as a guide for the gg GATT trade ministers, due to meet here from Nov. 24 to 27 for the first time since 1973, the report warned that protectionism could trigger a severe disturbance in the world financial system.

"It is often argued that a shortage of international liquidity leads to protectionism," the report said. "The danger inherent in the present situation is just the reverse - that protectionism could cause an international liquidity shortage."

U.K. inflation 6.8 percent

LONDON, Nov. 12 (R) - Britain's inflation rate fell in October to 6.8 percent compared with a year ago, the lowest level for 10 years, and is now below the international average, the government said Friday.

The announcement followed a cut in mortgage interest rates for building society home loans to 10 percent from 12 percent, a move that will speed the rapid decline of inflation.

Both figures were good news for the gov-ernment. A year ago, inflation was 12 percent and mortgages cost 15 percent. The yearon-year rate for retail price inflation in September was 7.3 percent.

The retail price index increased by 0.5 percent from September to October due to higher prices for petrol. cigarettes, and gas, but prices of fresh fruit continued to fall, the employment department said.

Employment Secretary Norman Tebbit said the inflation figure was the best since August 1972 when it was 6.6 perceot. "We are oow lower thao the international average which is something to be proud of." he said.

"The figure is coming down toward the rates of those countries we used to admire - tike Switzerland, where inflation is 5.5 percent, the United States, five perceot, and West Germany, 4.9 perceot."

Tebhit, criticized in partiament for Britain's high unemployment rate — 3.3 millioo people, one in seven members of the work force are jobless - added: "That is bound to help on the jobs front if we keep fighting the competitioo instead of squabhling among ourselves and avoid scoring any own goals.

The minister said it was clear that inflation would keep coming down and reach five perceot over the oext few months.

Order frees Walesa but confusion reins

WARSAW, Nov. 12 (AP) - Poland's martial law authorities have lifted the order to intern Solidarity chief Lech Walesa, an Interior Ministry spokesman said Friday, but there was still no word if the union leader had left for home.

Reliable Roman Catholic church sources in Gdansk, meanwhile, said Walesa's family had been told to expect him home "before

Pertini sends Spadolini to parliament

ROME, Nov. 12 (R) - Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini was asking parliament Friday to decide the fate of his collapsed five-party coalition following President Sandro Pertini's refusal to accept the government's resignation. In an unexpected move which surprised even Spadolini, the 86-yearold Socialist President insisted Thursday night that only parliament could decide to end a government's mandate.

The president resurrected the 11-week-old government only hours after Spadolini and his ministers had given up trying to settle a row over urgently needed economic measures and decided to resign,

The president, a strong-willed World War II partisan with a deep dislike of political maneuvering, stunned politicians and parliamentarians who had already begun discussing possible successors to Spadolini.

It was only the fourth time in Italy's turbulent postwar political history that a president had rejected a government's resignation. But political and party sources doubted that the president's insistence on a debate in parliament could do more than confirm the stale-

An official statement issued after Thursday's cablnet meeting said that the Republican Prime Minister's resignation stemmed from the refusal of his quarreling treasury and finance ministers to leave the cabinet. Both ministers later said they had never eceived an invitation to leave the govern-held Saturday and go directly to Gdansk. "The order of internment has been lifted, hut that does not mean it has begun to function in his place of internment." the Interior Ministry spokesman told Western reporters. Officials refused to say on the record precisely when Walesa would leave Arlamow the wooded, hilly area 800 kilometers south of Gdansk near Przemysl on the Polish-Soviet border, or how he would he taken to Gdansk where his wife is awaiting him.

the church sources in Gdansk said. The Justice Ministry, meanwhile denied that Walesa had already left Arlamow. saying "it is not true that Walesa has already been freed.'

Technically, Walesa could be considered a free man from the moment Interior Minister Gen. Czeslaw Kisczak ordered his release which was announced Wednesday by government spokesman Jerzey Urban.

Urban announced that Walesa would he freed because he no longer posed a threat to the country's internal security. An Interior Ministry spokesman Friday said of Walesa; as long as he is still interned, we will not be giving any information and when he is

There was little comment on the Walesa release in Polish dailies, swamped with obituaries, condolences and official reminiscenes on the life of Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev who died Wednesday.

The Warsaw daily Zycie Warszawy and the government paper Rzeczpospolita carried the story on their front pages under the beadline "Lech Walesa's internment order lifted." The Communist Party daily Trybuna Ludu' published the story on page five.

The initial reaction of Poles-in-the-street was dispeller. Many said they would like to see Walesa actually free before they believed the government announcement.

The news about the release of Walesa. coupled with agreement by the authorities to the long-stalled visit to the Pope next June suggests the authorities feel confident they have defeated Solidarity, and eliminated its "dangers" to their rule.

Meanwhile, the United States Thursday welcomed news of the impending release of Walesa. The State Department said: "We hope the report is true. The release of Lech Walesa and the many other internees in Poland is something which we and our allies. indeed people everywhere in the world, have been urging for the past 11 months."

Shuttle deploys satellite

(AP) - Pilots shifted the U.S. space sbuttle's orbit Friday, maneuvering to dispatch a second satellite to its "geosynch" outpost 36,000 kilometers high. The high-altitude release will complete NASA's first commercial mission's a $ 17 million commitment to deliver the satellites to space.

The first gleaming purple satellite was sent spinning out of Columbia's cargo bay after Thursday's liftoff and mission control told the four astronauts this morning: "It's going to be awfully hard for you guys to top vesterday.

The crew was determined to do so, because NASA officials believe double success will give the space agency a decided edge over the European space agency and others competing with the shuttle for commercial launch services.

Mission specialists Joseph Allen and William Lenoir were to monitor the afternoon deployment of Telesat Canada's link to communications satellite

During deployment of the first satellite, Columbia drifted into a slightly higher path. Cmdr. Vance Brand and pilot Robert Overmyer corrected that Friday with two hrief hursts from the ship's maneuvering engines. The firings also tested the engines after heing exposed to the cold shadows of space for more than 24 hours.

The crew activated a pair of experiments selected by NASA from hundreds submitted by students around the country. The first studies the growth of sponges in zero gravity, the second the formation of crystals in this environment.

Before retiring after a long and accomplished first day in space, Brand thanked the launch team for " a great ride " and said his crew was looking forward to four more days In orbit. They return to Earth next Tuesday.

Lenoir launched the first communications satellite, D-C, from the shuttle's cargo bay Thursday afternoon, just eight hours after Columbia hlazed away from Cape Canaveral on its inaugural mission for hire. Forty-five minutes later a motor fired to propel the 30-ton payload from 296 kilometers high toward, as Lepoir put it, geosynch" a stable orbit 36,000 kilometers out. A second engine ignition Saturday will circularize the satellite at that altitude the geosynchronous point in space where_ satellite speed matches the earth's rutation. and the station seems to hover over one point.

London landmark opens to public

LONDON, Nov. 12 (AP) - Tower Bridge, the sturdy landmark over the Thames, has reopened for the first time in 72 years in a celebration of Victorian durability and eccentricity. "It's London's Eiffel Tower," said John Fielding, tourist manager for the famous drawbridge built in 1894.

"There' nothing quite like it in the world. Certainly there are bigger and more splendid bridges, but this is the most unique, most instantly recognizable," be said.

The public had not been allowed to climb the twin five-story, fairy-castle towers of the hridge, or to cross the pedestrian walkway, since the towers were closed in 1910.

"Pedestrians soon found it was too much effort to climb up those stairs when the drawhridge was open," said Fielding, explaining that long-ago decision. "The walkways became a haven for derelicts, so they were closed to the public and only reopened with the renovation completed last June 30."

Now the walkways and the floor below in both towers are thronged by tourists who come for the view, and to see exhibits about the hridge's history, including its still opera-tional original lifting mechanism.

"Ever since I was a kid I've wanted to climb up here," said Fred Hilton, a 65-year-old Londoner who had brought his camera up to the now glass enclosed, wrought iron walk-

Fielding said 2,000 to 3,000 persons a day are visiting the reopened towers. "We've had a quarter of a million since July 1, so the renovation and museum have been a resounding success," he said. A visit costs 1.60 pounds ($2.70) for adults and 80 pence ($1.30) for children.

The bridge had a mixed reception when it first opened on june 30, 1894. The London Times called it one of the structural triumphs of this age of steel," hut a trade journal, The Bullder, dismissed the ornately carved and turreted German high Gothic towers as "elaborate and costly make-believe."

The total cost of the renovations, including replaced masonry and cast iron moulding, was about 5.5 million pounds ($9.4 million), Fielding said, nine times the 1894 original cost of the span. But none of the expense was borne hy taxpayers.

Upkeep of the four bridges in the city of London financial district — Tower, Southwark, Blackfriars and London Bridge - is covered by revenue from the private bridge house estates fund, established in 1176 when monks manned the first London bridge.

"Then it was popular to bequeath porperty and money to God and the bridge," said Fielding. "The property accumulated over 800 years now yields revenue of several mil-

Renewed heat on human rights

Hidden graveyards haunting Argentine regime

By Martin Andersen

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — The discovery of hundreds of unmarked tombs in at least seven cemeteries may prove to be Pandora's box for Argentina's military rulers, as human rights activists seek to pry open a lid of official silence on the fate of thousands of Argentines missing since the 1970s. The discovery has spurred not only a domestic controversy but strong foreign pressure to learn the fate of what human rights groups say are between 6,000 and 15,000 desaperecides — Spanish for "disappeared people."

The Italian Foreign Ministry announced last week it was sending a special envoy to Buenos Aires to try to speed up the investigation of the disappearance of 297 Italians or Italo-Argentines who have vanished here since 1976. The governments of France, West Germany, Spain, Sweden and Switzerland bave also requested in recent days that the Argentine regime clear up cases of missing people from their countries.

The issue received widespread public attention on Oct. 22, when six parents of missing people asked a municipal judge to determine whether their children lie in 88 unmarked tombs containing 400 bodies at the Gran Bourg cemetery, 24 kilometers from here. The cemetery is less than one km away from the Campo de Mayo army base. the country's largest military installation.

The parents cited reports of alleged nighttime burials by Argentine security forces and recent discovery of the body of 27-year-old labor organizer Miguel Angel Sosa, missing since 1976. Since the discovery at Gran Bourg, relatives of missing people have filed four other court petitions asking figures of unmarked graves in six other cemeteries in the Buenos Aires metropolitan area and in the city of La Plata, 48 kms south of bere..

The seven cemeteries contain more than 1,000 bodies in all, buman rights leaders said. The issue was given added impetus when investigating judge Hugo Gandara revealed that at least 31 entries in the Gran Bourg grave register were accompanied by notations saying. "military confrontation" or "army battle."

Human rights groups claim that Argentina's missing people vanished during the "dirty war," in the 170s in which the government crushed leftist guerrillas and other dissidents. Many disappeared after being arrested in their bomes by persons identifying themselves as members of the country's security forces. The Argentine government, however, has repeatedly said it has no specific knowledge about the fate of the missing. admitting only that there had been "excesses" during the fight against the leftists.

Interior Minister Llamil Reston has demied there had been after-hour burials in the country and said the anonymous graves belonged to "vagrants and indigeots." "There are no clandestine cemeteries," he said, adding that the charge was being made by "groups interrested in destroying our image — groups that have worked for years outside the country."

Officials here complain privately the issue is an unfair blow to the government of President Reynaldo Bignone, which has sought to discussions with political groups over the return to civilian rule scheduled for 1984. Human rights groups acknowledge that abuses have decreased from what they were during the years 1976 to 1979, when the repression was at its beight, but complain the government has not punished the abusers.

The issue has put the Bignone government on the defensive, political observers say, and comes at a time when an increasingly aggressive press and civilian political leadership have found their voice after six years of government-imposed silence. Among other issues the regime finds nertlesome are accusations of official corruption, blame-laying for defeat in the Falkland Islands War with Britain and an economic situation the finance minister admitted last month was the worst in Argentina's history.

Human rights leaders said they are pressing the issue of the hidden graveyards now because of a loosening up of the political climate. In the past, they say, the courts

would not have considered the cases, the newspapers would have been afraid to publish news about them, and they thems would have run grave physical risks.

"One important objective is achieved," said Jose Westerkamp, an internationally known physicist and human rights activist, in an interview. "The newspapers are publishing a lot about this and people are beginning to understand that something went terribly

For all its domestic implications, however, the Bignone regime is finding it is on the international front that the renewed heat on buman rights is hottest. Last week, the Italian Foreign Ministry said it would press for details from Argentina on the fate of missing people of Italian origin after newspapers there published a list of 297 Italian

Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini met with U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar in New York and asked him to press for a new investigation on the missing. The following day, Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo blasted the period of Argentine military rule as "a long night of death."

Meanwhile, 41 Spaniards, 48 Germans, 15 French and 120 Uruguayans, among others, have been listed as missing by their countries' foreign ministries or by human rights organ-

PEKING (AP) - The lilting strains of sentimental Communist Chinese music are followed by a soft, resonant female voice. which coos: "Dear Taiwan compatriots, I just want to be your friend."

This is the melodious, beckoning "Voice of the Motherland" - 42-year-old Xu Man. Her program, "Friends on the Air," is part of an intensified radio propaganda campaign directed at Nationalist China (Taiwan). Eight times a day, Miss Xu's 15-minute program is beamed over 11 frequencies across the 160-km Taiwan straits.

Her message is soft-sell, in contrast to the hostile, self-righteous propaganda of the Cultural Revolution era when announcers read People 's Daily editorials and lectured the Taiwan Chinese about the glories of communism. Absent also are the threats to

"We hear she is really big on Taiwan," one of her colleagues at central broadcasting boasts, "We want to quietly dispel the Nationalist rumors and set the record straight," Miss Xu told the Associated Press in an interview. "Taiwan newspapers are still printing stories that we need a permit to leave our houses and each person has only one ineb of cloth rationed each month."

One Taiwan listener wrote Miss Wn to ask: "After the reunification of Taiwan with the mainland, would we also need cooking oil and cotton coupons to live on Taiwan? The answer: Of course not. Taiwan can maintain its present life-style.

Miss Xu, mother of three, has shortcropped hair, deep dimples and a broad smile. She wears baggy, nondescript trousers and a gray jacket with a brightly colored shirt. Every day she courts 18 million Chinese in Taiwan, appealing to the profit instincts of Taiwan businessmen and pluncking at the beartstrings of Taiwan Chinese who long to see loved ones on the

Her refrain is China's nine-point plan for peaceful reunification, which claims Taiwan may retain capitalism, its armed forces, and its free way of life. Politics is interwoven with Chinese fairy tales about the moon festival, advice on treating stomach cancer with herbal medicine, and interviews with former Nationalist officers who returned to the mainland. Tourism is a major theme, artfully wrapped around nationalism.

Miss Xu reminds her listeners that all Chinese should see the grandeur of the motherland, weaving visions of standing at the Great Wall, climbing the misted Taishan mountain, floating down the gorges of the Yangtze River.

Her program has received about 400 letters since it began in January 1981, and she directs her listeners to write to a box number at any Chinese diplomatic post. There are no direct mail links between Taiwan and China. In ber answers, she lures Taiwan businessmen with special advantages and discreet treatment.

Miss Xu also belps locate lost relatives and helps families correspond by mail. Hundreds of thousands of Chinese were separated after the 1949 Communist victory when the Nationalists fled to Taiwan. She once received a letter from Taiwan listing 30 lost relatives and dispatched two

These services are a small chapter in the struggle between the Taiwan and the mainland for the hearts and minds of each other's citizens. After a defecting Chinese Air Force pilot arrived in Taiwan on Oct. 31. Taiwan newspapers printed for the first time a picture of Miss Xu's Taiwan counterpart, known as "The Rose," whose broadcasts are credited with persuading seven Chinese pilots to defect to Taiwan. The pilot read a statement on radio saying his decision to defect had been influenced by radio Taiwan broadcasts.

Peking bas in turn increased the resources for radio propaganda. The message: Life is good and getting better, please come home. On Oct. 1 - national day -Peking increased the daily Taiwan broadcast from 21 hours to nearly 38 hours over various frequencies, with 24 announcers in Hakka and Minan dialects - proclaiming higher living standards on the mainland. U.S., Britain asséssing harm done by Prime LONDON (R) - The British and American intelligence communities are trying to calculate the damage done to Western security by linguist Geoffrey Prime who spent 14 years spying for the Soviet Union.

Sentencing Prime to 35 years jail on Wednesday, the judge told the Soviet agent: "By your treachery you have done incalculable harm to the interests and security of this country and its allies." But intelligence experts have already been able to sketch ont the general extent of the damage done to Western Security by Prime, 44, a Russian speaker who monitored Soviet communications at Britain's big codehreaking and electronic eavesdropping center at Cheltenham in western England.

Prime Minister Margaret Thateher told parliament the other day that Prime's spying must have tipped off the Soviet Union about the West's knowledge of important aspects of Soviet defense. The Soviet KGB intelligence service would also have got valuable clues as tn how the West got that information, she Assessing the case before any details were made public. United States Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger remarked that it was "serious but not catastrophic." Prime's treachery was not believed to have threatened the lives of Western agents or divulged the deployment of allied troops or nuclear weapons, Mrs. Thateher said.

According to intelligence experts, Prime would have been able to tell the Russians which of their codes had been broken and permit them to alter radio transmission frequences. He could have also helped the KGB to organize 'misinformation' to baffle Western analysts. Knowing which areas of Soviet communications the West was interested in would give the Kremlin vital clues to Western thinking. On several occasions Soviet codes were inexplicably changed, cutting off sources of intelligence, experts said.

Prime lived mndestly at Laburnum Cottage in a leafy lane in the spa town of Cheltenham. He had a short wave radio, microdot manual, miniature camera and code pads furnished by the KGB. Important secrets are held behind many such prim front doors in Cheltenham, where one in 10 of the population works at the sprawling government Communications Headquarters (GCHG), reported to cost some 300 million sterling ($500 million) annually.

The center employs $,000 people and works closely with the United States National Security Agency Prime worked in section "J" which analyzes Soviet military, diplomatic and civil radio traffic picked up by listening posts in Hong Kong, Cyprus, Singapore and elsewhere.

According to U.S. press reports, American officials are angry over the Prime affair. They noted that Prime was only uncovered because he got into trouble for molesting small girls. A U.S. intelligence team is already at Cheltenham helping to build up a detailed picture of Prime's treachery, according to reports in Britain not officially confirmed.

Reports say that one object is to assess whether Prime is important enough for the Soviet Union to want to exchange him for a Western spy. Lax security at Cheltenham has been alleged by Britons as well as American officials. Alex Lawrie, a Cheltenham man-Who was a linguist at the base for 22 years, said: "In all that time, I wasn't searched once." A married couple employed at the center said they had taken home computers to play space games with their son.

If the United States were to limit intelligence cooperation in the wake of the Prime scandal it would be a blow to Britain. The British intelligence community can least of all afford to lose its access to American spy-inthe-sky satellite data.

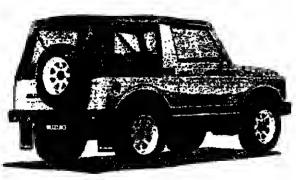

When British officials last month disclosed the defection to Britain of a Soviet diplomat, 35-year-old Andreyevitch Kuzichkin, British journalist Chanman Pincher said it was likely the British government urgently needed a publicity triumph to offset an impending dis-

Official apathy criticized

India fails to check perennial flood havoc

By Jagan Nath

NEW DELHI (Depthnews) — "400 feared drowned in Alaknanda;" "31 vehicles washed away in night of horror;" "Pilgrims nightmare near Chamoli;" "Aid rushed to rain and flood-stricken hill district"... These are samples of headlines appearing in Indian newspapers every year, sending waves of shock and disbelief down the spines of millions of readers.

Apart from the havoc and destruction wrought on human life and property, the floods don't spare even the dead. For instance, disposal of bodies hecame a problem in areas suhmerged by 10 feet of water in some places.

But that is not all; there is much more than meets the eye. Every year officials go through the whole stereotyped range of appeals, aerial surveys, relief operations and uncontrolled expenditure over the annual disaster. This year was no exception and the same rituals were observed.

According to official estimates, the annual average loss caused by floods was $580 million from 1953 to 1980. This does not include government loss in terms of remission of land revenue. Every year, about 1,000 Indians are killed in floods as well as 20,000 heads of the official estimate was $26 million as against $660 million during each of the last four years. Indeed, the flood situation in most of the affected areas is grim and critical. In some towns, most parts are said to be still under water.

Besides, at least one million tons of foodgrains are lost to floods annually. And flood losses are increasing. For instance, in 1950

Commenting on official apathy to deal with the recurring menace, the Northern Indian daily Patrika in Allahabad does some plain speaking. It says: "Floods are not new to these areas. But in spite of the known threat from them almost every year, nothing seems to have been done to check their onslaught.

"During her recent halt at Allahabad, Mrs. Gandhi revealed that she had suggested the formulation of short and long-term plans to meet the frequent flood threats. But we wonder whether her suggestion would be remembered once the flood waters recede.

"At the moment there is a cry for putting up a dam here and setting up an embankment there. But unless these dams and embankments are planned as part of a coordinated scheme, there might be overlapping of Similarly, the daily Pioneer of Lucknow has taken the government to task for its failure to check the menace. It says: "In all civilized countries researchers, experts and competent administrators are permanently engaged in devising methods to avert all avoidable disasters and swing into action methodically as a disciplined force to mitigate the sufferings and to ensure speedy rehabilitation when an area is struck by an act of God—earthquake, sudden floods and a devastating forest fire.

"Over here, it is painful to record that certain vested interests have been created to manipulate what are known as natural disasters to their advantage. Venal politicians, hired party workers and an inept and corrupt officialdom try to extort maximum possible personal or partisan gains from the much drummed-up relief and rehabilitation meas-

Reports are that there has been widespread bungling in relief operations. Atalmost every flood-hit area, there is widespread complaint that local officials are withholding and selling relief material. In some places officials and policemen have been beaten up by angry mobs.

Although grain output has not dipped in the affected areas, New Delhi has imported 2.5 million tons of wheat from the U.S. this year to meet reduced food stocks. This will offset the slight damage caused to the harvested wheat in Punjah and Haryana states.

The fact is that the floods in India are a perennial problem which, many believe, should be tackled on a war fonting. For years the federal government has been contemplating a master plan to solve the problem permanently.

The plan entails construction of large reservoirs for storage of water near the river basins. Nearly 90 percent of floodwaters go to waste at present. If harnessed properly, the

For Mrs. W.: I'll give you the high points about "reflux esophagitis." Your doctor can fill you in with the rest as it applies to you. It means irritation or inflammation of the esophagus, Acid from the stomach and digestive juices flows back into the esophagus. It opens so that food or fluids from the mouth can enter the stomach and then closes to prevent reflux. Esophagitis is caused by anything that will interfere with proper closing of the valve. Hiatus hernia is a common cause. Sometimes muscle spasm can do it. Lying down can produce it. Obesity, pregnancy and tight clothing can cause it. The most common symptom is heartburn. Pain under the breastbone is another and sometimes, difficulty in swallowing. If the symptoms are mild, avoid hearty meals or spicy food, especially before lying down. Use antacids. Especially if swallowing difficulty is the main symptom, better see a doctor for X-rays. Eat small meals. Raise the head of the bed. But, if symptom persists, better determine if you'll need medical or surgical treatment.

In the wake of this year's disastrons floods, Irrigation Minister Kedar Pandey amounced that work on the ambitious plan would start soon. Costing $62,500 million, the plan is expected to be finished by the end of the century

An Indian irrigation expert has stressed the need for afforestation to fight the floods. He says the Western countries are now concentrating on this method. He cited the example of France where two neighboring areas, one with a lot of trees, bushes, orchards and another with practically no trees were.

In the other area, the same amount of rains had caused floods and choked the entire drainage system. This shows that forests are a bulwark against the floods, according to the

The recent floods have again stressed the importance of drawing up a plan for disaster management along realistic lines. But the formation of any plan will be useless unless it is implemented speedily and, perhaps more important, honestly.

New U.S. discovery may help cancer test

OCEAN CITY, New Jersey, (AP) — Scientists training bacteria to eat hazardous wastes say that the tiny "super bugs" may hold the key to future decontamination of poisonous dump sites.

Researchers at the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's Cincinnati office are feeding contaminated water and sludge to micro-organisms which break down the complex molecules into simpler components, said EPA chemist Charles Rogers.

"These waste waters contain just about any organic compound you can think of," Rogers said, adding that scientists hope eventually to turn the ravenous bacteria loose in contaminated dumps and groundwater supplies to feast on poisons.

Rogers ontlined the process to government officials and chemical industry representatives attending a conference on hazardous wastes, sponsored by the independent environmental Hazards Managment Institute of Portsmouth, New Hampshire.

The manner by which the "super bugs" would decompose the hazardous wastes is similar to the way the human body breaks down food into nutritious materials, Rogers

New book on addiction to violence raises furor

By Katherine Whitehorn

LONDON (OSS) — Erin Pizzey was one of the first women in the world to start a refuge for battered wives, now recognized as a worldwide phenomenon. In London where she first started, however, she's recently been booed and jeered by the very women who are running the refuges — all because of her new book. Prope to Violence.

In it, she gives a lot of evidence — and plenty of horrific interviews to back it up — that suggests that not all the women who are beaten up by their mates are appaled and sickened by it all. She thinks that people hrought up violently can get addited, as it were, to their own adrenalin, and come to need the violence like a drug.

Even children, she thinks, can begin to take pain for pleasure. She tells of a haby that tears its own stomach while it suckles, of a small boy whose mother had stopped maltreating him — hut they noticed hurns on his wrists: "I hurn myself with Mum's fag when she isn't looking," he smiled. She describes another child wriggling with excitement as he remembered how a man beat his mother till the hlood ran down her

What makes this so tricky an issue is that there are plenty of people, as it is, who want to write off the whole battered women hit as "they like it" or "they've asked for it."

Men who are hostile to women, and women who want to feel it could never happen to them if they don't provoke it, are happy to blame the women (though I don't quite see how they get round the children). But only some of the women are on this adrenalin "high" of excitement; most are genuinely hurt and bewildered victims.

Erin Pizzey knows this; when a violent man came roaring round to the refuge, most of the women hid and the children cried. But there were some children excited at the prospect of a fight, some women who crowded round with shining eyes.

What I suspect the protesters cannot face is the idea that the enjoyment of cruelty, the bloodlust of fighting and rage, is not confined to "them", however you define "them" — men, Nazis, terrorists, the enemy.

At school we were taught to be amazed that Dante thought the blessed would enjoy looking down at the agony of the damned. Yet people in the Middle Ages did enjoy watching people flayed alive or burned at the stake. We, of course, only watch simulated events — though it may not make quite as much difference as we think: the battered women all knew that they were in for it if there was a violent film on TV.

What I do not mean is anything resembling the breast-beating cry of "we are all guilty". That simply blurs the distinctions between those people, families or systems that are some good at holding the devil at bay, and those that are not. I'm arguing that we have to recognize that fighting and blood and violence are exciting; the problem kinet just "to hring out the good in us all" but to give no opportunity to the bad.

If we better recognized our dark side, I believe we could more effectively control it than we do now. We would never, for example, think it safe to let one set of human heings have total control over another, whether warders or mental nurses or corporals or parents. We might be able to figure out a way of getting some of the violence off our screens, big and little, without, by censorship, opening the door to state tyranny. It is even possible we could work out a way of getting children away from violent parents, without subjecting them to a different sort of violence in institutions, where they sit, as Erin puts it, "like little time-hombs ready to explode on the streets in 10 years time."

Know your enemy, you can do more for goodness. I helieve, if you admit the attractions of evil. And if you doubt them, reading this book might change your mind. The most appalling thing about it is that if a exciting.

Colitis charmed away—by smoking

LONDON (LPS): It has long been medically established that smoking is harmful, but for those suffering from the distressing and potentially fatal condition called ulcerative colitis it can be a positive boon. For according to research in Britain, smoking can clear up the symptoms in some sufferers.

Ulcerative colitis is an uncontrollable, degenerative hleeding and ulceration of the colon, the symptoms of which are severe diarrhea, the passing of blood and mucus, and a fever. But it seems that smokers are protected against this condition.

The theory was first mooted by Dr. A D Harries, of the department of gastroenterology, at University Hospital of Wales, Cardiff, who has reported to the British Medical Journal that his research has shown that the majority of those suffering from ulcerative colitis are non-smokers. Drs.C J Roberts and R Diggle, of Newhury, Berkshire (southern England) also reported that they had identified a patient whose colitis symptoms and been "charmed away" in a matter of days by taking up smoking.

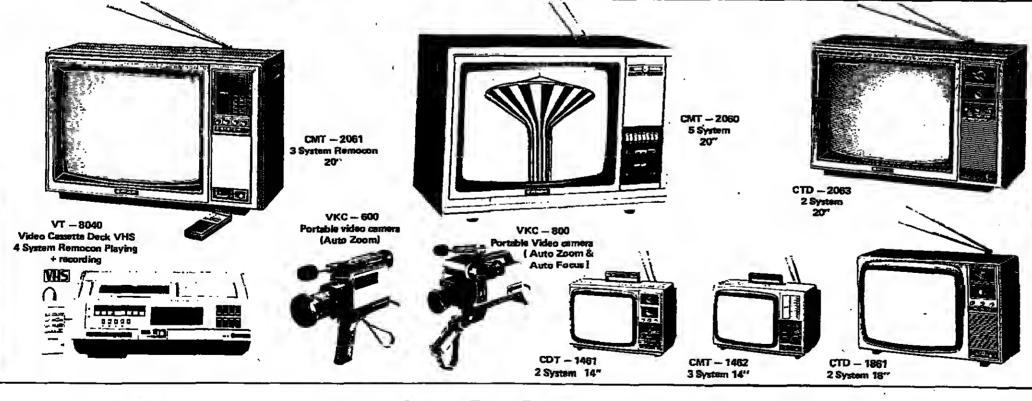

The patient herself tested the association between smoking and the onset of colitis and found that each time she stopped smoking the symptoms reappeared within 48-72 hours. Nicotine, carried in the bloodstream directly to the site of the inflamed ulcer, seemed to be the magical ingredient.

is LONGFELLOW One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Pass Pass Opening lead spades. This deal occurred in the 1980 World Bridge Olympiad.

When Greece played the hand against Indonesia, their North-South pair (D. Yannoutsos partnered with Theodore Triantafillopoulos) got to four spades on the sequence shown. West led a trump, taken with the queen, and Triant (as he is called for short) continued with a low trump to the ace. He next led a diamond, West going up with the ace and returning a low club.

whether declarer played low from dummy or went up with the king; either way the contract was doomed because he: had to lose two clubs, a diamond and a heart for down

one. But Triant would have made four spades had he played the hand a little more cautiously. It was likely from the bidding that West held the king of hearts, ace of diamonds and ace of clubs for his opening

West presumably wins with the king but declarer is now sure of ten tricks whatever West plays next. South's only losers will be either a heart, a diamond and a club, or a heart and two clubs depending on West's.

return at trick three. In effect, Triant lost the contract by timing his plays in-correctly. He should have led a heart instead of a diamond early in the play, rather than a ... diamond before a heart. Had be done that, West would have found it impossible to stop; declarer from making four spades. Of course, if West had led a club originally, the contract would have failed. In all fairness, however, an opening club lead by West is much easier to find after seeing 52
